IRELAND'S CHAMPION.

Gladstone Explains his Famous Home-Rule Measure.

THE PROVISIONS OF THE SCHEME

Thrilling Scenes in and Surrounding the House of Commons—One of the Greatest Days in the History of the Empire

LONDON, April 8.—Gladstone slept well last night. He rose early in excellent health and high spirits. His voice was fresh, strong and evidently enduring. Immediately after finishing his breakfast Gladstone repaired to his official room. There he found prepared for his perusal the morning papers, scores of telegrams [illegible] on the task of the day, and more than one letter from close personal friends and advisers, carrying words of cheer and congratulations.

Before the night watchmen in the house of commons were relieved or the lights were extinguished, a number of members of parliament and gentlemen assured of admittance began to arrive to make themselves doubly certain of their privileges by getting to their seats eleven hours before Gladstone would reach the house and retaining them during the long interval.

Sullivan, member for Southwest Meath, was the first to arrive [illegible] to the house. He got in as early as 5:30 last evening, and [illegible] to make sure of his place. [illegible] secured his own [illegible] Sullivan [illegible] a seat was exist[illegible] for orators.

PARNELLITES GET THE FLOOR.

Long before daybreak all the Parnellites were in the house, and they pre-empted the best places in the locality provided. Sullivan and all got places in the front of Gladstone during his speech. A rush of Irish members followed close upon the advent of the Parnellites. It was yet early in the morning when all the seats on the floor were taken.

A seat chosen in order to be retained must be ticketed with the hat of the member who means to occupy it, and it must be the hat he is wearing that day, and no substitution is permitted. This rule retains members within a limit agreeable to traverse with bare heads. The present generation never witnessed such a [illegible] scene as occurred in the house of commons this morning, long before London was awake. A number of members were afraid to trust to the honor of their colleagues for maintenance of the rules on an occasion like that of to-day, and those retained possession of their chosen seats by remaining in them bodily all day.

ENORMOUS CROWDS.

1 P. M.—The weather is warm, clear and beautiful. After exhausting all expedients to kill time outside, the members began to assemble in the house after 1 o'clock. In an hour the floor was pretty well covered with groups of members animatedly discussing the event of the day and debating the possible outcome. The crowds outside the house by this time had increased greatly. At 1 o'clock the crowd outside the palace gate was enormous. It contained all the space down to Westminster bridge, and extended pretty well up Parliament street towards Whitehall. At that hour a perfect jam of people filled Downing street, where Gladstone's official residence is situated. This crowd is patiently waiting for the premier to make his appearance for his departure for the commons.

Gladstone finished reading his papers and telegrams and mail correspondence at an early hour. He spent the remainder of the morning and part of the afternoon in contemplation. He refused to permit himself to be disturbed by calls from any large number of persons who attempted to see him. He made but one exception, that in favor of John Morley, chief secretary for Ireland, whom he sent for and conferred with for a short time.

The commons clock, to which Big Ben, England's giant bell, rings the time in Victoria tower on the southwest corner of the parliament buildings, stopped this afternoon. Its stoppage was noticed by the crowds in the streets who depended on its tones for knowing the time of day, and was regarded by thousands as an ill omen.

Soon after 3 P. M. the thoroughfares about St. Stephens were so crowded with people that all attempts to carry on traffic in the neighborhood had to be suspended. Mounted police were placed on duty patrolling, because it was impossible for officers on foot to get about.

THE SPEAKER TAKES THE CHAIR.

Peele, speaker of the house, took the chair promptly at 4 o'clock. The chamber at the time was packed to the very extreme limit of its capacity, and every door showed the hallways crammed with people all craning to see and hear. The weather at this time suddenly changed. Clouds lowered and thunder was heard. Nevertheless the mass of people outside increased and became denser.

Catholic priests were conspicuously numerous in the crowds, and no less than thirty-five branches of the London organization of the Irish national league were represented by full delegations, whose identity could be established, even at a distance, by their green regalias. Political clubs beyond numbering were also present to take part in the popular demonstration. At 4 o'clock deputations from thirty-two liberal clubs alone had been counted in the throng.

GLADSTONE'S REMARKABLE RECEPTION.

Before going to the commons Gladstone took a drive through St. James's park, going away from the crowd by the west end of Downing street. He desired to be a while in the fresh air before going to parliament. He returned to his residence and in a few minutes emerged on his way to the commons. The police had opened a way for him through Parliament street and down that across Bridge street to the house. They had to work hard to make this passage way, and harder yet to keep it open. Gladstone went in an open carriage and his appearance was greeted with deafening cheers. The enthusiasm of the people all the way from the door of his house to the commons' entrance was spontaneous and thrilling. It vented itself at the beginning of the journey in a roar great enough to make most statesmen dizzy, and when the whole huge multitude caught the signal one tremendous long sustained cheer was set up the like of which was never before heard in London, and which was plainly audible in the house. The cheering continued until long after Gladstone had entered the parliament buildings.

Within the buildings the prime minister's reception, though less demonstrative, was equally enthusiastic. [illegible] He was apparently in the best of spirits and bowed to the right and left to his acquaintances as he passed them.

[illegible]

At 4:30 [illegible] entered the house. His entrance was followed by loud and prolonged cheers, which were continued for several minutes. Among friends and Parnellites the wildest enthusiasm prevailed, and it is safe to say that no such scene was ever witnessed before in the commons.

As soon as the cheering had ceased Gladstone rose and moved for permission to introduce a bill to amend previous legislation, and to make provision for the future government of Ireland. On making this motion Gladstone said:

I could wish that it had been possible for me to unfold to the house the whole policy and intentions of the government with reference to Ireland. [illegible] questions of land [illegible] and Irish government [illegible]

THE ROADS PART.

We should [illegible] with the question [illegible] We should [illegible] have arrived at [illegible] when two roads part [illegible] is one which it is incumbent on the duty and honor of parliament to come to a decisive resolution on the matter. Our intention is therefore to propose to the commons that which happily, as I believe, will we think liberate parliament from the restraints under which of late years it has ineffectually struggled to perform the business of the country, and will restore British legislation to its natural, ancient, unimpeded course, and above all establish harmonious relations between Great Britain and Ireland. [Hear, Hear!] on the footing of those free institutions to which Englishmen and Scotchmen are alike unalterably attached. [illegible] cheers prolonged by home rule members.

[illegible] A FAILURE.

After [illegible] the [illegible] and crime existing in Ireland, Gladstone described coercion [illegible] during the same period [illegible] He compared Ireland [illegible] a man trying to find [illegible] only meant for cure. [illegible] continued to prevail in Ireland and if England and Scotland had suffered similar hardships, he believed the people of those countries would have resorted to means similar to those the Irish had used to ventilate their grievances. [Parnellite cheers.] Coercion was admitted to be a failure for the past fifty three years; only two or [illegible] which had been wholly free of repressive legislation. [illegible] unbending and [illegible] government must always fail. [illegible] should never resort to until [illegible] What was the basis [illegible] was the fact that the law was [illegible] in Ireland. It came to the Irish people with a foreign aspect and [illegible] was to strip the law of its foreign character and invest it with a domestic character. [Loud Irish cheers.]

[illegible] represented in parliament [illegible] with England or Scotland, was [illegible] England [illegible] and Scotland had been [illegible] The consequence was [illegible] in England and Scotland [illegible] and the [illegible] in Ireland was not felt by the people in Ireland. He therefore [illegible] that no party [illegible] to hold that the state of law [illegible] to the vital unity of this great world wide empire.

[illegible]

Something must be done [illegible] continued Mr. Gladstone [illegible] What was the problem before [illegible] How to reconcile imperial unity with diversity of legislatures. Mr. Grattan held that these purposes are irreconcilable. More than that he demanded severance of parliaments, with a view to [illegible] the empire. Was that an [illegible]? Other countries had solved the problem [illegible] much more difficult circumstances. We ourselves might be said to have solved it with respect to Ireland during the time that Ireland had a separate parliament. Did it destroy the unity of the British empire? [Cheers.]

Mr. [illegible] the case of Norway and Sweden [illegible] Austria and Hungary [illegible] the parliament of Great Britain [illegible] supreme in point of authority [illegible]

THE UNION MUST STAND.

[illegible] the government [illegible] about to propose [illegible] repeal of the union. It was impossible to [illegible] of the union until they had settled what was the essence of the union. He defined the essence of that union to be the fact that where [illegible] there were two separate and independent parliaments, after union there was but one. To speak of dismemberment of the empire was in this century monstrous and an absurdity. The unit of the administrative system of Ireland was that its spring, its source of action was English. [Cheers.] The government therefore felt that the settlement of the question was to be found by establishing a parliament in Dublin. [Irish cheers] for the conduct of business of both a legislative and administrative nature.

The political economy of the three countries must be reconciled. There should be an equitable distribution of imperial burdens. Next there must be a reasonable safeguard for the minority, and why could not this minority in Ireland take care of itself? He had no doubt about its ability to do that when we have passed through the present critical period and been disarmed of the jealousies which any change was apt to excite. But for the present there were three classes of people whom they were bound to consider: First the class connected with land; second, civil servants and officers of the government in Ireland; third, the Protestant minority.

AS REGARDS ULSTER.

The speaker could not admit the claim of the Protestant minority in Ulster or elsewhere to rule on questions which were for the whole of Ireland. Several schemes for the separate government of Ulster had been submitted to him. One was that Ulster province should be excluded from the operation of the present bill; another was the separate autonomy should be [illegible] for Ulster; and a third suggested that certain rights should be reserved [illegible] provincial council. None of these proposals had appeared to the government to be so completely justified by its merits or by the weight of public opinion in its favor as to warrant the government in including it in the bill. However they deserved [illegible] consideration [illegible] the government would do their best to [illegible]

THE LAST SETTLEMENT.

Referring to the great settlement of 1782 Mr. Gladstone said: It was not a real settlement, and was it Ireland that prevented a real settlement being made? [Irish cheers.] No, it was a mistaken policy of England listening to the [illegible] The Irish parliament [illegible] under great disadvantages, yet it had in it a spark of the spirit of freedom and it emancipated Roman Catholics of Ireland when Roman Catholics of London were still unemancipated. It received Lord Fitzwilliam with open arms, and when after a brief career he was recalled to England the Irish parliament registered their confidence in him by passing a resolution recording that he should still administer the government. Lord Fitzwilliam had promoted the admission of Roman Catholics into the Irish parliament and there was a spirit in that parliament which, if it had free scope, would have done noble work and probably would have solved all Irish problems and have saved this government infinite trouble.

THE PROPOSED LEGISLATURE.

The speaker said he would now pass to the plan how to give Ireland a legislature to deal with Irish as distinguished from imperial affairs. He was confronted at the outset with what he felt to be a formidable dilemma. Ireland was to have a domestic legislature for Irish affairs. That was his postulate from which he set out. Were Irish members and Irish representative peers in either house to continue to form a part of the representative assemblies? The speaker thought it would be perfectly fair that if Ireland was to have a domestic legislature Irish peers and Irish representatives could not come to parliament to control English and Scotch affairs. [Cheers.]

Then with regard to the question which Irish representatives should come to the house of commons for the settlement of imperial affairs, he thought that it could not be done. He had thus [illegible] arrived at the conclusion that Irish members and Irish peers ought not to sit in the palace of Westminster. ["Oh! Oh!" and cheers.] If Irish members were not to sit in the house of commons Irish peers ought not to sit in the other house of parliament. [Hear, Hear, and Oh!]

CONCERNING TAXATION.

How were the Irish people to be taxed if they had not legislators in both countries? He believed that Great Britain would never impose upon Ireland taxation without representation and added: If we were to have taxation without representation there would come another question [illegible] difficulty [illegible] He did not think that by giving up the [illegible] of the empire [illegible] the empire would be a public misfortune for Great Britain and a greater misfortune for Ireland. He conceived that one escape from this dilemma would be such an arrangement as would give the imperial government authority to levy customs duties and such excise as were immediately connected with the customs. These conditions [illegible] such an arrangement were then that the general power of taxation over and above those particular duties should pass into the hands of the domestic legislature in Ireland. [illegible] customs and excise should be held for the [illegible] of Ireland and payment of the balance [illegible] Irish [illegible] legislative body.

[illegible]

[illegible] power of voting separately on any occasion or demand of either body, which would be able to interpose a veto upon any measure for a limited time, either until dissolution or for three years. The orders would be constituted as follows:

First—There were twenty eight representative peers who could not continue to sit in the house of lords after the representatives of the Irish people left the house of commons. They would have the option of sitting as a portion of the first order in the Irish parliament, which power of sitting continued for life. He proposed that with the twenty eight peers now in the lords there should sit seventy five representatives elected by the Irish people. With regard to the powers of election the constituency would be composed of occupiers of the value of 25 pounds and upwards, and they would be elected for ten years. The property qualification of these representatives would be £200 annual value or a capital value of £4000.

Mr. Gladstone said that he proposed that the 103 Irish members in the house of commons should be members of the Irish parliament, and whilst the first order of the legislative body would consist of [illegible] members, the second order would consist of [illegible]

THE [illegible]

[illegible] the viceroy [illegible] representative of a party [illegible] government. The [illegible] delegate to him any [illegible]

The religious disability now existing, which makes a Roman Catholic ineligible to office, would be removed.

In the future judges would be appointed by the government to be paid out of a consolidated fund [illegible] removable only on the joint address of the two orders.

The constabulary would remain under the present terms of service and under their present authority.

With respect to the civil service the government did not think their case was the same as the [illegible] constabulary, and a transfer of the civil service to the Irish [illegible] would effect great economy. He therefore thought it would be wise to authorize [illegible] pensions [illegible] from rapid transitions of [illegible] Mr. Gladstone stated that he had to say on the [illegible] Constitution.

[illegible] FINANCES.

The proportion of imperial burdens which he would propose that Ireland should bear was [illegible]. He thought the new Irish parliament ought to start with a balance to its credit, but he could only find it [illegible] £20,000 from the Irish church fund. He knew no way of providing the necessary [illegible] out of this year's [illegible] until [illegible] proposed that in the future Ireland should pay a contribution toward imperial expenditures.

Chancellor [illegible] stated with confidence [illegible] matter of [illegible] with regard to the far greater portion [illegible] Irish [illegible] Ireland [illegible] £400,000 per annum. He then entered into an elaborate calculation of the total income and expenditure of Ireland and stated the total charge to Ireland as an imperial contribution, which he put at £[illegible],000 per annum. He estimated total expenditure of Ireland, including payment as a sinking fund for the Irish portion of the national debt, at £[illegible],347,000 per annum. Again there was a total income of £8,[illegible],000, or a surplus to the government of £404,000.

THE LAND QUESTION.

With regard to the history of the land question no man could know that it did not [illegible] from year to year beginning with the Devon commission, the appointment of which, the speaker said, did the highest honor to the memory of Sir Robert Peele. [Cheers.]

He did not deny the good intentions of the British parliament to pass good laws for Ireland, but, he said, in order to work [illegible] of the government in this [illegible] good laws. [illegible] When I [illegible] in the colonial office fifty years ago the colonies were governed from Downing street. The result was that the home government was always in conflict with those colonies which had legislative assemblies. We had continual shocks with the colonies then. But all that has been changed. The British parliament tried to pass good laws [illegible] "We don't want your good laws; we want our own good laws," and parliament at length admitted the reasonableness of this principle. This principle has now come home to us from across the seas and the house has now to consider whether it is applicable to the case of Ireland. We now stand face to face with what is termed the Irish [illegible] for the Irish [illegible] government in Irish, not imperial affairs.

LOCAL PATRIOTISM.

In conclusion Mr. Gladstone said: I hold that there is such a thing as local patriotism which in itself is not bad, but good. [Cheers.] The Welshman is full of local patriotism. If I read Irish history aright, misfortune and calamity have wedded her sons to their soil with an embrace yet closer than is known elsewhere, and the Irishman is still more profoundly Irish. But it does not follow that because his local patriotism is strong he is incapable of imperial patriotism. There are two modes of presenting the subject which I have argued. One of them is to present it as what we now recommend as good, and the other is to present it as a choice of evils and as the least among the varied evils with which as possible ties, we are confronted. I do not know whether it may appear too bold. In my own heart I cherish a hope that this is not merely a choice of the lesser evil, but that it may be proved ere long to be good in itself. [Loud cheers.] There is I know an answer to this, and that answer is only found in a view which rests upon a basis of despair, of absolute condemnation of Ireland and Irishmen as exceptions to those beneficial provisions which have made in general Europeans, in particular Englishmen and Americans, capable of self-government; that an Irishman is lusus naturae; that justice, common sense, moderation and national prosperity have no meaning for him; that all he can understand and all that he can appreciate is strife and perpetual dissension. Now sir, I am not going to argue in this house whether this monstrous view [Irish cheers] is a correct one. I say that an Irishman is as capable of loyalty as another man. [Renewed cheers.] But if his loyalty has been checked why it is because the laws by which he is governed do not present themselves to him as they do to us in England or Scotland with a native congenial element.

THE FINAL APPEAL.

I have no right to say that Ireland, through her constitutionally elected members, will accept the [illegible] I propose. I hope they will, but I have [illegible] to assume it. Nor have I any power to [illegible] it upon the people of England and Scotland. I rely upon the patriotism and sagacity of this house, on free and full discussion, and more than all upon the just and generous sentiments of two British nations. And looking forward I ask the house, believing that no trivial motive could have [illegible] to assist in the work we have undertaken, a work which we believe will restore parliament to its free and unimpeded course. I ask them to stop the waste of public treasure under the present system of government and administration in Ireland which is not a waste only, but a waste which demoralizes [illegible]. I ask them to show to Europe and America that we too can face political problems which America had to face twenty years ago, and which many countries in Europe have been called upon to face, and have not feared to deal with. I ask that we shall practice as we have very often preached, and that in our own case we should be firm and fearless in applying doctrines we have often inculcated in others, that concession of local self-government is not the way to sap and impair, but to strengthen and consolidate unity. I ask that we should learn to rely less on mere written stipulations and more on those better stipulations written on the heart and the mind of man. I ask that we should apply to Ireland the happy experience we have gained in England and Scotland, where the course of generations has now taught us not as a dream or theory but as a matter of practice and of life that the best and surest foundation we can find to build on is the foundation afforded by the affections and convictions and will of man, and that it is thus by will of the Almighty far more than by any other method that we may be enabled to secure at once social happiness, power and permanence of the empire. [illegible]

Mr. Gladstone resumed his seat amid bursts of thunderous cheers which were sustained for several minutes. Mr. Gladstone's speech was three hours and twenty five minutes in [illegible]

TREVELYAN DEFENDS HIS [illegible]

When the applause had subsided Mr. [illegible] Trevelyan, who recently resigned the position of secretary for Scotland [illegible]. After [illegible] Gladstone [illegible] Trevelyan rose and [illegible] that he [illegible] explain the reason of his resignation. [illegible] with extreme compunction and [illegible] although the step when finally decided upon was taken with no [illegible] the proposal of the [illegible] He had [illegible] cabinet [illegible] and would be [illegible] Mr. Gladstone [illegible] the liberals from [illegible] the country [illegible] The [illegible] Trevelyan [illegible] How long [illegible] this measure that has been submitted [illegible] of Irish [illegible] Ireland [illegible] from Great Britain would be preferable to the plan of government that has just been proposed. We should then know the worst at once.

THE REMARKS OF PARNELL.

At the conclusion of Mr. Trevelyan's speech Mr. Parnell arose and was received with cheers by the Irish members. Mr. Trevelyan, he said, had stated why he had left the government, but not why he had resigned his post as chief secretary. [Cheers from the Irish branch.] Mr. Parnell then went on to justify his past utterances and action which had been impugned by Mr. Trevelyan. Speaking of America and assassination literature which came from America, Mr. Parnell said that [illegible] of the literature was neither American nor Irish literature. If Mr. Trevelyan [illegible] to study the literature of America at this moment he would find that sympathy for just settlement of the grievances of Ireland by concession of domestic legislation is shown by all classes, whether Irish or native born Americans, and more especially that native born Americans are welcoming the efforts of Mr. Gladstone in the belief that they will bring peace between England and Ireland, and more especially between Irish-Americans and England. It is a remarkable fact [illegible] legislature [illegible] conductors of Irish-American newspapers. [illegible] the fact that during the last five or six months [illegible] succeeded in nearly gaining the sympathy of the two great parties in America, democratic and republican—as a good omen for the future. [Cheers.]

FLAWS IN THE MEASURE.

As to the bill before the house, while reserving his full expression of opinion until he had seen the bill, Mr. Parnell congratulated the house on the fact that there was still living an English statesman who would and could devote his attention to this important matter [illegible] Mr. Gladstone for what would not only prove a benefit [illegible] from an Irish point of view, but which he (Parnell) believed would [illegible] benefit to England. The [illegible] the Irish representatives would do their best to improve [illegible] the bill [illegible] tribute to the subject. [illegible] also complained of the proposition [illegible] the Irish [illegible] on the ground [illegible] order consisting of peers [illegible] the popular vote would have the power of hampering measures [illegible] by the people and their representatives for two or three years or wholly. However, apart from these defects he believed the measure would be cheerfully accepted by the Irish people and their representatives as a satisfactory solution of the long standing dispute between the two countries, and as tending to prosperity and peace in Ireland and to satisfaction in England. [Cheers.]

THE DEBATE ADJOURNED.

On motion of Mr. Chamberlain the debate was adjourned. Sir William Vernon Harcourt previously stating that Mr. Gladstone would move to-morrow to give the debate precedence over other matters. Mr. Gladstone left the house ten minutes after concluding his speech. He was affected by a reaction after the intense excitement of the day, and was obliged to retire immediately after dinner.

The cabinet has been adjourned to meet on Friday.

BEFORE THE SPEECH

Another Interesting Description of the Scenes in and Around the Building

LONDON, April 8.—The crowd that began to assemble outside the palace yard about 7 o'clock this morning amused itself for a while in watching the members who came early to secure seats. At this time the greater number in the crowd were Irishmen. They cheered every Parnellite who came along. As the day advanced the assemblage increased until it filled up all the thoroughfares and open spaces of ground in the neighborhood as far as Downing street. At 4 o'clock the entire mass of people was the largest that has collected in one body in London for many years. The entire throng was thickly dotted with individuals bearing the Irish colors and National league emblems. Of course in a crowd so immense there was a great deal of noise and pushing, about but as a whole good order prevailed, and no police interference at any time was required.

GLADSTONE'S JOURNEY TO THE HOUSE.

Gladstone left his residence in Downing street for the house of commons precisely at 4:30 P. M., accompanied by Mrs. Gladstone. At this time every inch of roadway except the path kept open by the police for Gladstone's carriage, and every inch of the dozen [illegible] points of vantage afforded by doorsteps, windows and roofs from Downing street to Westminster, were covered by people; the crowd swarming to Westminster bridge, and every [illegible] locomotion by vehicle.

The rain now became a steady, penetrating downpour, but there was no break in the crowd until Gladstone's carriage passed. The tremendous crowd then commenced the cheering with which was greeted during the whole of his progress, accompanied by groans every here and there, but ill feeling was not manifested with sufficient strength either to irritate the majority of the crowd or to attract Gladstone's attention. When the premier disappeared within the parliament building the crowd melted in the rain and had disappeared entirely within half an hour after Gladstone began his speech. At this time all outside was bereft of excitement while the chambers of the house were in a perfect quiver.

AN ARISTOCRATIC MOB.

Before the speaker entered, the floor of the house, lobbies, stairways and galleries were in possession of a scattered mob of gentle and aristocratic people struggling for places to hear and see the orator of the day. There were fifty times as many persons engaged in the struggle as could possibly be accommodated, and in the surge bishops, peers and plenipotentiaries ran foul of commoners, reporters and people of every sort. In one group were seen at one time the Greek ambassador, Gen. Sickles, Cardinal Manning, Editor Burnand of Punch, the Japanese ambassador and Michael Davitt—the six jammed in a struggle about the door of the speaker's gallery. They were rescued, and after being marched and counter-marched about the lobby into the outer lobby and back again, were finally enabled to get the places secured for them.

In another door several score of noblemen asserted their privileges too boisterously and had to be checked by police on duty.

Every square foot of space in the galleries held human beings. The Prince of Wales, his son Prince Albert Victor, the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Christian and Minister Phelps occupied seats during the speech in the front room of the peers' gallery, Phelps sitting beside Prince Christian. A large number of members of the house of commons unable because of its inadequate capacity to accommodate the whole membership to obtain places on the floor, helped to jam the galleries.

GLADSTONE'S RECEPTION.

As well known members entered the house they were greeted with cheers. Sometimes the cheers were genuine and hearty, and sometimes they were given in apparent mocking. John Bright, who entered with a feeble gait, was greeted with ringing and approving cheers. The Parnellites gave Parnell and Morley a hearty reception. [illegible] welcomed Goschen with derisive shouts. The Marquis of Hartington drew a rousing volley of cheers from both [illegible] the house.

During a momentary lull in the confusion the cheers of the house were suddenly started by a wild cry that came from the throats of those who were first to catch sight of Gladstone gliding towards his seat from behind the speaker's chair. Irish members sprang to their feet as one man, and for several minutes an uproar of enthusiastic applause continued. The full throated Irish cheer that T. P. O'Connor had feared the interloping tories might capture, [illegible] this power was repeated till the whole building seemed to reverberate with its triumphant [illegible]. Gladstone seated himself between Morley and Sir Wm. Vernon Harcourt. He looked very pale, paler even than usual. The anxious [illegible] to have deepened [illegible] for his [illegible] fitness, but his steps as he came in [illegible] fearful confidence in the success of his tory [illegible] speech.

MRS. GLADSTONE.

The rule which practically excludes ladies from [illegible] the sight in the house of commons and which on occasions like that of to-day inexorably separates husband and wife who are fortunate enough to secure seats among the spectators, compelled Mrs. Gladstone to hide herself behind the screen closing the front of the ladies' gallery. This venerable lady was the most interested of all the spectators. There she met the Princess of Wales, whose royal blood could not procure for her the privilege of sitting beside her husband in the house any more than the prime minister's wife could claim it for herself on the [illegible] witnessing the noblest effort of her husband's career. With the Princess of Wales were Prince Henry of Battenberg and Princess Beatrice, the Duchess of St. Albans, the Countesses of Rosebery and Spencer and a host of other ladies of noble blood.

GLADSTONE'S APPEARANCE.

It was 4:52 o'clock when the speaker called upon [illegible] to the floor. Gladstone arose and [illegible] with the most prolonged outburst of cheering ever heard in the house of commons. He was visibly deeply impressed by the reception. When he finally was permitted to speak his first [illegible] were not audible to the reporters. His voice [illegible] was not equal to the great task before the orator, but it was not that Gladstone was in a state of amazement caused no doubt by the unexpected character of his welcome. This [illegible] finally disappeared and when he had [illegible] sentences he found his voice [illegible] than the serious and settled melancholy [illegible] of the man, his appearance [illegible] and his undoubted physical weakness tended to give a very much exaggerated idea of hoarseness of voice and the hearer's sympathies being with the venerable orator, his voice grated on the ear. But [illegible] Gladstone steadied himself to his task, his voice grew even, clear and strong, and eventually penetrating, ringing and sonorous.

WORSE THAN FIRST REPORTED.

A Graphic Description of the Awful Scene—Press Comment on the San Francisco Indignity—Eastern Notes

GREENFIELD, Mass., April 8.—It is thought that twenty persons have been seriously injured and seven killed, with a score of others more or less injured. Two more bodies last extracted from the wreck have been identified as C. T. Temple, of Wakefield, Mass., and Chas. H. Durkin, of Boston. Two young girls whose names are unknown are reported to be among the killed.

Meritt Seeley, superintendent of the National Express company, injured last night in the accident, died this morning. Brakeman Spencer's body was found last night with the bodies of two unknown travelers. Engineer Littlejohn cannot live till night. Two bodies were brought here this morning by the wrecking train. One was E. E. Hayden, and the other man was about 65 or 67 years old and was identified as J. R. Goslof, of Abington, Conn. John Crowley, of North Adams, was on the train and is insane.

These bodies have been found and are at Shelburn Falls: Viola Littlejohn, L. F. Whitehouse, of Boston, Mark Spencer, brakeman, and Charles Temple. The body of Whitehouse was found in the river under the car.

A body just found at the wreck is believed to be that of Agent Whitehouse, of the New England & Boston line. The body of Charles Durkin, of Boston, has also been recovered.

A GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION.

F. F. Whitehouse probably never knew what killed him. The wound over his eye was a terrible one and must have produced utter unconsciousness. When the car struck the water he was buried under its weight and his body was found in six feet of water.

E. E. Hayden must have died in frightful agony. When found his right arm was raised above his head as though he had attempted to clutch some support. The fingers of this hand were burned to a crisp and the top of his head was literally roasted. His mouth was open, as though he had been shrieking with agony.

Since last night not less than 10,000 persons have visited the spot, some of them walking from six to ten miles to view the wreck. As viewed by daylight the scene is far worse than reported last night. It is considered marvelous that any escaped alive. The descent is 1[illegible]0 feet by actual measurement.

Crowds of people hovered about the precipice to-day, and hundreds descended to the river by means of strong cables, which the wrecking crew had stretched to the river bank. Four cars were thrown into the river, along with which was the sleeper. The tender was thrown to the very bottom of the precipice, a mass of twisted and broken iron and steel, twisted out of all semblance of its former shape.

A LEAP FOR LIFE.

Frank Lane, of Boston, was standing on the platform of the rear car at the time of the accident. He said he was startled by the bumping of the cars along the ties. He knew they had left the track, and jumped just as the train went whirling down the awful chasm. It was an awful night. Not a star was to be seen and no light of the moon illuminated the fearful blackness over the scene. To add to the misery of the situation snow soon commenced to fall, and in the fullest sense it was a night of terror. Shrieks of the wounded rent the air and their cries and groans were terrible. The wailing of a mother over the death of her little girl was heartrending. Penned in the wreck unable to effect her escape and expecting each moment to be crushed by falling boulders or debris from the track she passed an hour of fearful agony.

Mr. Lane stood rooted to the spot, his blood fairly chilled in his veins. Far below in the rush of the whirling flood he could hear shrieks for help, but he was powerless to respond. Then red flames shot up among the shattered mass and spread with startling rapidity, and the shrieks of agony were redoubled. The imprisoned passengers faced the fire fiend's breath. One cry was heard above the rest, one shriek of agony and piteous pleading for help, as E. E. Hayden, held fast by a mass of debris, felt the scorching flames upon his face and he sank into the insensibility of death.

CRIES FOR HELP.

A. K. Warner's cries of agony brought landlord Hager of Greenfield to his side. Tenderly he took the wounded man upon his lap and loudly shouted for help, but the mocking echoes of the neighboring hills were for nearly half an hour all the response his cries evoked. It was a night of heroism.

Conductor Foster, though sadly wounded himself, was to-day so concerned at the death and suffering of the others that he was mildly insane. He did all in his power to recover the dead and rescue the living.

Hundreds of excited persons crowded around the depot, some of whom were anxious for the safety of friends who were on the fated train, and when the bodies were brought in for identification hundreds thronged around, dreading to look at the dead, fearing to recognize among them the bodies of friends. Every possible means has been taken to clear away the wreck and recover the dead.

PRESS COMMENT ON THE SAN FRANCISCO INDIGNITY.

NEW YORK, April 8.—Papers generally condemn the treatment of the Chinese embassy at San Francisco. The Herald says: Prejudice against Chinese has often been carried to unwarranted extremes by officials on the Pacific coast, but the most flagrant exhibition of it is in the gross indignity heaped upon the envoy of the emperor of China. President Cleveland should not hesitate to condemn the outrage by the summary removal of the offenders from the offices they have disgraced.

The Times, in a bitter editorial headed "A Remarkable Collector," says: "Collector of Customs Hager at the port of San Francisco has administered his office with a view of showing how much he disliked the Chinese and how impatient he was of the existence of commerce that mainly makes it necessary that there should be a collector of customs at San Francisco. He has gone out of his official duties to make manifest his dislike of the Chinese. The present Chinese minister at Washington has made formal complaint against the uncivil collector, and he should be promptly removed. It is not probable that any senator would be found to sustain the particular variety of offensive partisanship by which Hager commends himself to the hoodlums of San Francisco at the cost of disgusting and mortifying all decent Americans.

PORTLAND, FRIDAY APRIL 9, 1886

ADMISSION OF WASHINGTON

The bill for erection of Washington territory into a state ought to become a law. It undoubtedly would, were it not feared that its electoral vote might disturb political calculations for 1888. Against admission of Washington there can be no legitimate argument based on alleged want of population, resources or wealth. It has fully three times the average wealth and population of all the new states at the time of their admission, which have been created since the constitution was adopted.

During many years past [illegible] all times when [illegible] or the country [illegible] of Washington [illegible] state Washington would more [illegible] the character and standing [illegible] pendent [illegible] considerations [illegible] and power [illegible] bring its claims [illegible] in congress and at the same time [illegible] the way of securing to [illegible] all [illegible] of the country the attention [illegible] its [illegible] and its resources entitle it.

Some objection has been made in congress to the admission of Washington on the alleged ground that the progress of the territory is not based on stability and permanence. This is the argument of dense ignorance or of intentional misrepresentation. All the conditions of growth and prosperity in Washington territory are of the most stable kind. The foundations thereof were planted forty years ago and from that day to this there has been no interruption of progressive movement. Most of the people are of the best class whose blood and bone and moral fiber enter into the composition of American commonwealths. Objection has been made to admission on the ground that the criminal assaults upon the Chinese at Puget sound indicate a turbulent and lawless population, but those assaults were made by only a handful of persons, mostly migratory, who are no type whatever of the people of the territory, and it should not escape recollection that the good people quickly put them down.

Senator Dolph has been speaking with great earnestness in behalf of the admission of Washington, ably supported by Senator Platt of Connecticut. Platt's speech, delivered on the 30th of March, is worthy of notice as a plea by an eastern senator for justice to the people of a western territory. Said Mr. Platt: "No territory ever knocked at the door of congress with a better population in all that goes to make up the class who are to maintain the institutions of a state." This senator also dwelt at length on the natural resources of the territory, showing how abundant and varied they are. "It has excellent agricultural lands; it has abundance of the precious minerals; it has large coal fields; it has grand water ways and an extensive system of railroads; it has the most magnificent body of timber that exists to-day in the civilized world." With the counties of Northern Idaho added, the area would be about 90,000 square miles, and the present population not much under 200,000. The territory has all the resources necessary to support a population of millions, and within a dozen years it will go ahead in wealth and population of one-third of the states of the Union. Its slow progress, hitherto, like that of Oregon, has been due to distance and isolation, now no longer a bar to development here.

NO INCREASE OF THE ARMY

The action of the senate in rejecting the bill to increase the army to thirty thousand men will generally commend itself to the good sense of the country. The army is large enough to keep the Indians under control. The rapid settlement of the territories west of the Missouri, along the great lines of transcontinental railway has reduced the chance of a successful Indian outbreak to the lowest terms. The only Indians formidable through their numbers are the Sioux and their kindred, the Cheyennes, but these tribes are surrounded by an increasing circle of fire in the shape of military posts and powerful white settlements, so that no danger from them is apprehended that could not be easily met and overcome by our present army. The only other use we have for an increased army is to suppress industrial riots and agrarian insurrections against authority. It is better to leave the suppression of such disturbances to the militia of the state or territory in which the acts of turbulence and riot may arise. It is of the highest importance that the several states and territories should be strongly stimulated to maintain an efficient militia; they will not do it if they feel that they can always fall back on the federal army when their own civil posse is overpowered. In the event of a war of any magnitude our armies would be composed of volunteers and in that event the raw lines could be easily fertilized for military efficiency by at once dispersing or merging the officers and men of the regular army into the mass of the volunteers to leaven its lump. This, as Grant points out in his memoirs, is what we foolishly failed to do in the civil war, and in consequence our volunteers were deprived of the services of a large amount of trained military instructors, whose light was lost, serving as company officers in the "regular divisions" at the East and the West. The Confederates, having no regular army to officer, disbursed their trained soldiers through their volunteers to their great advantage in the first two years of the war. What we need now is not an increase of our regular army, but the placing of great harbors and seaport cities in a condition of complete defense. They are to-day defenseless against the attack of the iron clads of even a second rate power like Italy; the iron clads of England or France could destroy millions of property with a few hours bombardment, and while [illegible] a foreign war is improbable, it is no [illegible] and a great nation has no business to be caught naked by its possible foes of the future. It will take ten years of work and one hundred millions of money to effectively arm our sea coast, but it would be money wisely spent. If the democratic party had a particle of sagacity they would make a popular stroke for themselves by promptly putting our seaports from Portland to San Francisco in a state of perfect defense against any possible foe.

A flower show, [illegible] at [illegible] was held in New York during the latter days of March. In the [illegible] were [illegible] which [illegible] have filled more than two or three ordinary washtubs. Professional florists take great interest in these specimens, but to the untrained eye—the eye of the person who likes "posies"—a collection of the fabulously expensive plants are said to suggest the idea of a brush heap with a few flowers in it.

The amounts drawn from the taxpayers of New York for the expenses of the state government in 1885 aggregated $6,577,151, an increase of about 152 per cent. in twenty five years. Of this sum over $2,000,000 is paid out in salaries and allowance, to the more than 6000 officials upon the state's pay rolls. The Albany Journal says that there is plenty of evidence to show that "this money, in the hands of democratic politicians, has been exceedingly useful to the democratic party."

Richmond, Va., is having a fight on the liquor question similar to that which took place in Atlanta, Ga., last year. There will be an election at Richmond on the 20th of April, upon the question of prohibiting the sale of liquors in the city. Excitement is running higher than at any time since Lee's surrender. The prohibitionists say that if they can carry Richmond they will make Virginia a prohibition state.

Ohio papers indicate that great excitement is prevailing in that state over the action of the ways and means committee in putting wool on the free list. Democrats say that if the bill goes through the house it will have the effect of winding up the affairs of the democratic party in Ohio, for the present at least.

Commissioner Black draws the largest pension on the rolls. This should occasion no dissatisfaction. Total disability is a grievous affliction.

AS TO THE TAXING OF RAILROADS

The most important of all the provisions in the bill submitted by the assessment commission is that which proposes to tax railroads upon their gross earnings. This method applies only to such property as is absolutely necessary for the operation of the roads [illegible] to be taxed [illegible] value [illegible] All the returns [illegible] the state [illegible] the method [illegible] the nature of railroad [illegible] that of a facility valuable only as a means of carrying on business. To [illegible] value of its [illegible] a manifest injustice [illegible] assessment [illegible] railroad running through a [illegible] country where the cost of construction is great [illegible] where there is little business [illegible] affording a large [illegible] profitable traffic. The value of the traffic is manifestly a more just subject of taxation than the value of the facility. Under this system the common [illegible] point [illegible] state will reap the advantages of its growth and development by the increase of revenue consequent upon increased traffic. While admitting the injustice of the present method of taxation upon the valuation of road bed, etc., there are those who insist that a railroad should be taxed, not upon its gross earnings, but upon its profits. If this were practicable, it would be a just method, unquestionably, but we believe that the effect of such a regulation would be to relieve railroads from paying any tax whatever. They could, and nobody will doubt that they would, make it appear by their accounts that the profits were nothing.

Upon the proposition to make the revenue from taxation of railroads an exclusive state fund there is likely to be wide difference of opinion. It is a scheme to diffuse among the various counties, indirectly by reducing the levy for state purposes, the income from the taxation of railroads, which, as great public institutions drawing their business from the whole state, should be taxed for the general and not for local advantage. That this plan meets with decided protests from the counties which now draw a large income from direct taxation of railroads is clearest proof of the inequality of the existing system. They object with selfish interest, not entirely creditable, to a division of the revenue from railroads which would give those counties which have no railroads or only a small mileage, a just share of the taxation derived from institutions which all contribute to support. There are likely to be some so hard of understanding as not to appreciate the fact that the distribution of the benefits of railroad taxation are real because they are not apparent under a system which actually returns nothing to the various counties. A very little reflection will make it clear that whatever sum is paid to the state from railroads will relieve the counties of paying to the state an equal sum and will enable each county to increase its levy for local purposes without increasing the whole amount of tax.

It will be noticed by examining the new bill that the income from insurance, sleeping car, telephone, express and telegraph companies, not taxed heretofore, as well as that from railroad companies, is to be paid into the state treasury for an exclusive state fund. It is estimated by the commission that upon the rates it proposes—[illegible] per cent. for railroads, [illegible] per mile of wire for telegraph companies, and 3 per cent. of gross receipts from the various other companies—will raise at this time a total of $115,000, or an amount equal to about one half the annual expense of the state government. Starting with this magnificent proportion it cannot be long till this income, increasing with the growth and development of the country, will cover the whole charges of the state government. The advantages resulting from the financial independence of the state would be greater than might be imagined at first view. Dependence upon the counties for support involves the laying of a special tax upon all in proportion to the valuation of property. Thus, the lower the valuation of its property the less a county has to pay for state purposes. It is this which has caused the undervaluation of property throughout the state and the inequalities which grow out of this practice. Make the state independent by giving it an independent source of income, and taxation within the counties then becomes merely a local matter. There will then be no advantage in undervaluation of property, for if the valuation is low the rate will have to be high.

In studying this law in its details, we grow in the opinion that the commissioners made a mistake in not dividing its matter into three, four or five general laws. The chance of enacting a law involving so many considerations of principle and policy and touching so many interests, is greater if it be presented in detail, for there is not likely to be a single member of the legislature who, in viewing the bill as a whole, will not find some point for objection. By presenting the system in a single bill, every man who has a particular objection will be brought into antagonism with the whole. We believe that it will be found advisable before submitting the measure to a vote in the legislative assembly to separate its chief counts into special bills. The work has now passed from the hands of the commission. The first work of the legislature after organization should be to create a joint committee to receive and consider this measure, and to prepare it for consideration and action in the prescribed ways.

The St. Louis Globe Democrat says: "It is the duty of every citizen, be he knight of labor or Knight of Capital, to stand by the laws of his country as against the orders, rules or constitutions of any society or organization, secret or public. If the laws are oppressive to any class they should be changed, but no class or [illegible] of men have a right to defy the law, and erect in its stead the despotism of an executive committee. [illegible] Industrial relations cannot be adjusted by feelings of sentiment. The [illegible] and [illegible] upon which all legitimate business is conducted may be [illegible] but it is the essence of industrial life and upon this depends the life of labor itself. Anarchy [illegible] overset is order revolution [illegible], but both would entail upon the laborers of the country miseries far which they would vainly seek to [illegible] [illegible] years."

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

[illegible] The two carloads [illegible] by the Portland lime and cement company for the tramway from their quarries to the railroad siding, have arrived and will be shipped south as soon as possible. The distance from the quarries to the siding is about half a mile, in which distance there is a fall of 750 feet. Three tracks will be laid and halfway between the [illegible] and the railroad will be a double track arranged so as to allow the cars to pass. A drum with [illegible] will be placed at the quarry, over which will pass a steel wire rope to each end of which a car will be attached. The [illegible] going down will draw the empty one up and they will pass each other midway the track. [illegible] will dump their loads, about two tons of limestone, automatically upon the railroad cars. The [illegible] are all ready, and the road ready for laying the track as soon as it arrives. So about the last of next week the rock will begin coming to the kiln. By that time the appliances for carrying the rock to the top of the kiln and the cars for carrying the lime from the kiln to the warehouse will be ready and the kiln will be at once started up.

CORRAL YOUR CHICKENS.—Chicken fanciers and others who have a fancy for keeping chickens for their own profit or the annoyance of their neighbors will do well to bear in mind the fact that their pets have been placed on the list of animals not allowed to run or play at large within the city limits in this city, and that they had better speedily convert their chickens into [illegible] or provide some safe enclosure wherein they can be kept. Poundmaster Henry Wilson will be on the warpath in a few days armed with nets calculated to take in a whole flock of chickens at one fell swoop, and as he has a great passion for chicken in any form he may be expected to make relentless war on all gallinaceous transgressors. Eggs are so cheap now that it is hardly worth while to be bothered with chickens in the city except for the pleasure to be derived from seeing one's fowls destroying the gardens of his neighbors.

OFFICE REMOVED.—The office of the Columbia River paper company has been removed to the lower wharf at the foot of Washington street temporarily. The company is about to build spacious and elegant offices on the upper dock and did not intend to move until they were completed, but owing to repairs being needed to the building they were occupying they were obliged to move out at once and so hurriedly put up a temporary office at the lower wharf to accommodate them till the new offices can be completed. The warehouse on the dock lately leased by the company is being repaired and put in shape for a paper warehouse. The old floor is being removed and will be replaced with one of 4 inch plank dressed on both sides and the building will be whitewashed throughout. When all is completed the company will have ample and suitable accommodation for their extensive business.

ANOTHER DEEP SEA FISHING ENTERPRISE.—The little sloop Adventure, which has been lying for several days at Kinney's dock, is now about ready for operations. She was launched at Ilwaco and is owned by C. E. Allen, A. T. Harris, A. Mc[illegible] Lane and S. McKenzie her builder. She is [illegible] feet over all, 17 feet [illegible] inches beam, [illegible] feet and 1 inch depth of hold, and registers [illegible] tons. Preparations for the season's fishing have been delayed some on account of sending to San Francisco for a suitable capstan, but she will take in ballast to-day and start out to fish the first of next week. Mr. McKenzie is an experienced fisherman from the Scotland coast and is familiar with the use of the gear which will be employed by him in fishing at the mouth of the Columbia. The crew will consist of four able and experienced men and the gear used will be similar to that used by Capt. [illegible]—Astorian.

COUNTY DEMOCRACY.—This body met last night and proceeded to elect the following new officers for the ensuing two years: President, W. D. Fenton; vice-presidents, J. T. Hughes, E. [illegible] Dodge, C. F. S. Wood, Jos. R. Wiley, J. B. Kelly, A. [illegible] Sears Jr, J. J. McKinnon, J. B. Cox, J. C. Shofner; treasurer, John P. Watson; secretary, George A. Brodie. A vote of thanks to Mr. Sidney Dell, the retiring president, was adopted for his able and impartial discharge of the duties of his office for the past two years. Mr. Fenton was introduced to the body by the retiring president and made some appropriate remarks on assuming the chair. After the transaction of some other business looking to the well being of the county democracy that body then adjourned until next Thursday evening.

WILL ASSIST IN SERVICES HERE.—At the earnest solicitation of many friends in the W. C. T. U. and I. O. G. T., Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, grand lecturer of the I. O. G. T. of Oregon, has canceled his engagement at Astoria Saturday and Sunday so as to assist Mrs. Narcissa White in the Gospel temperance services at the tabernacle next Sunday afternoon. Prof. Crowhurst is an intelligent and earnest worker in the temperance cause, and is well known throughout California and the Willamette valley. From a Salem paper we clip the following: "Prof. Crowhurst, who lectures Saturday and Sunday evenings in this city, is the gentleman who was tendered the presidency of the Willamette university at the time of the retirement of Prof. Gatch."

ENDOWMENT FOR THE ALBANY COLLEGE.—The board of directors of the Albany collegiate institute have perfected arrangements for sending Prof. J. C. Wyckoff, president of the faculty, East for the purpose of securing aid in raising sufficient funds to complete an endowment of $30 000 already partially subscribed. Messrs. W. S. Ladd and H. W. Corbett generously donated $5000 each as an endowment to the college upon the condition that the amount be raised to $30 000 within one year from next July. This amount, it is hoped, will be increased to $16 000 by subscriptions from residents of Albany, leaving $14 000 yet to be raised. It is for the purpose of securing aid in raising this amount that Prof. Wyckoff goes East.

HORSES TO KANSAS.—On Wednesday of this week twelve carloads of horses were shipped from Arlington (formerly Alkali) to various points in Kansas. A number of horse raisers clubbed together to make the shipment, only one of the number having two carloads. Shipments of horses and cattle from the "bunch grass region" during the past three months have been very large—a great increase over last year. Rates by rail are so low that livestock is no longer driven to market across the Rocky mountains. With the books of the railroad companies as a source of information it will be possible hereafter to obtain something like correct figures on Oregon's exports of horses and cattle.

DUNNED ON A CUFF.—An epistle of a novel character passed through the postoffice yesterday. The novelty consisted in the material upon which it was written, which was a gentleman's linen cuff. There was nothing unusual in the contents which were simply a dun couched in the following language: "Please call around and pay your wash bill. Your Laundryman." The cuff was adorned with a two-cent stamp, which will carry a letter safely no matter on what it is written. Should the recipient not feel inclined to pay it is suggested that he give his note written on a cuff or collar. It might not be as durable as one on buckskin but would answer all purposes.

ROSEBURG'S NEW REGISTER.—Mr. Charles W. Johnston, who was appointed register of the land office at Roseburg on Wednesday as announced in THE OREGONIAN'S dispatches, has been a resident of this city for three years, during which time he was engaged as head bookkeeper for W. S. Mason and Mason, Ehrman & Co. Mr. Johnston is a brother of the late George Penn Johnston, the well known Pacific coast journalist, who died in San Francisco in 188[illegible]. He is a good citizen and a democrat to the backbone, and will make an efficient officer.

VISITING RAILROADERS.—A quartet of jolly railroad men are en route to Portland in a special car and will arrive here Sunday. They are Arthur Mills, traffic manager of the Boston & Albany; George Darling, [illegible] of the New York Central; C. S. Tappan and B. B. Mitchell, general manager of the Canada Southern and the [illegible] Fast Freight lines. The object of their visit is principally recreation and what they [illegible] to take in this way is not worth taking.

OPIUM SMOKERS DISCHARGED.—The [illegible] men arrested some weeks ago on warrants issued from Justice Davis's court for opium smoking, were yesterday discharged from custody, as the grand jury did not think the evidence sufficient to bring an indictment. According to this the new law passed at the special session of the legislature regulating the sale and smoking of opium don't appear to be any improvement over the old one.

HIGH SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT.—The entertainment to be given to-morrow night by the pupils of the Portland High school will take place in the assembly hall. The programme is a very attractive one, opening with a chorus prelude by about one hundred trained voices. "The Courtship of Miles Standish" and the farce "Elevator" by W. D. Howells, will be presented and some very choice musical selections.

BRIEF MENTION.

There are but three city patients at the Good Samaritan hospital.

The Tivoli is the favorite place of amusement in the south end. Take First street cars.

John Pickerell was fined $25 by Justice Davis yesterday for stealing a saddle from [illegible] Gardner.

To-night the last of a series of children's socials under the auspices of the G. A. R. will be given at their hall.

Kohler & Chase have just issued a new band catalogue full of information to musicians, which they send free to any address.

License to wed was issued yesterday to E. C. Chapman and Hannah Richardson, and Carston Bick and Caroline Schlottmann.

There will be a meeting of prohibitionists to-night (Friday) to prepare for the county convention, which meets Saturday at 10 A. M.

A lad named Reed, living near Seventh and Washington, was run over by an express wagon at Fifteenth and B yesterday and severely bruised.

The remains of Morris Moskovich, who was killed last Sunday morning on board of the steamer Mexico, will be shipped to San Francisco to-night.

While Smith Bros.' mill was burning last night a lamp exploded in the Multnomah street railway car stables. The blaze was extinguished by the employes; damages nominal.

In the list of subscribers to Edward Espey's Repose presented to the library association, the subscriptions of Mr. Kenneth Macleay $[illegible] 00 and Mr. C. [illegible] $2 were omitted.

It is likely that the Queen of the Pacific will replace the State of California on the Portland route and that she will leave San Francisco on Wednesday the 14th inst., one day behind the State's regular time.

Yesterday Ah Hong swore out a warrant in Justice Redman's court against Long Noye, for assault with intent to kill. Noye pointed a pistol at Hong, but was prevented from using it. Judge Redman dismissed the case, as it was shown that Ah Hong made the complaint to get even with Noye for having him arrested in Davis's court. Noye, otherwise known as Thomas Lusk, is the fellow who had Ah Hong run in for breaking up his school.

A DIVORCE CASE ENDED

The Supreme Court Affirms the Decision of the Lower Court in the Case of Oakley vs. Oakley

The decision of the supreme court in the case of Oakley vs. Oakley ends one of the most protracted and hotly contested divorce cases known in the annals of the Oregon courts. The suit was commenced by Mrs. [illegible] Oakley in November [illegible] to procure a divorce from her husband and to secure the custody of the child, a boy then about 4 years old. The case was referred to [illegible] to report on the findings of fact and conclusions. He took the testimony of about sixty witnesses, which covered about 1,600 pages of legal cap. He reported to the court granting Mrs. Oakley a divorce but not on the grounds on which she asked it, and in a supplemental report found that Mr. Oakley was entitled to the possession of the child. Both parties filed exceptions to the report of the referee and the case came up for trial before Judge Stearns in department No. [illegible] of the state circuit court on exceptions to the report of the referee. In July, 188[illegible], the court granted Mrs. Oakley a divorce and appointed Dr. [illegible] Hill trustee for the care and support of the child. After he had had charge of the child for a month he resigned the position of trustee and the case again came up before the court on the question of the custody of the child. This was decided by the court appointing Milton Weidler guardian of the boy, and ordering that either of the parents be permitted to see him at proper times. Both parties appealed from the decree of Judge Stearns and from the report of the referee, and this brought the case before the supreme court. Before it came to trial there Mr. Oakley offered to dismiss his appeal if the plaintiff would do likewise. This she refused to do, but offered to dismiss her appeal if defendant would consent to a decree that the boy be placed at the University of the Pacific, in California, in charge of Dr. C. C. Stratton, who should be sole trustee for the care and education of the child, and that the question of the child's support and her counsel fees be left to the decree of the supreme court. Defendant refused to entertain this proposition, so the case was tried de novo in the supreme court. This tribunal affirmed the decree of the circuit court granting the divorce and allowing the child to remain in the custody of Mr. Weidler, both parties paying their own costs on the appeal. James Gleason and W. T. Gilbert conducted the case of Mr. Oakley while the interests of Mrs. Oakley were in the hands of Messrs. Northup, Gronaugh and Whalley.

THE EAST SIDE.

A LARGE SAWMILL [illegible]

[illegible] Shipley was in the city yesterday on a brief visit among friends. Mr. S. has charge of the construction of a new sawmill now being built by Messrs. Borthwick and Fraine at Chenoweth landing, twenty-six miles above Bonneville, on the Washington territory side of the Columbia. This mill, when completed, will be one of the finest on the Columbia and will have a capacity of over 40 000 feet per day. The proprietors have a contract from the O. R. & N. Co. for over 10,000,000 feet of bridge timber and railroad ties which will be turned out as rapidly as possible. The mill will be ready for work in a few weeks. Mr. Shipley, the builder, who was called away from his labors by the sudden death of his wife, returned to his work on the midnight freight train last night.

A MUSICAL TREAT.

Arrangements have at last been perfected for a concert by B. Frank Walters and Miss Walters in this city. The concert will be given at Neppach's hall immediately after the Lenten season. It is understood that the proceeds derived from the sale of tickets will be divided equally between the W. C. T. U. of this city and the participants in the entertainment. Our citizens have complained, and justly too, that no first class talent honors the East Side with evening entertainments, but in Prof. Walters and his superbly accomplished daughter every desire of even the most critical is met.

WITH HONORS.

At the examination before the faculty of the medical department of Willamette university in Portland last evening, B. F. Gillespie and Mrs. Simon Schmeer, of this city, passed with high honors. Mr. Gillespie has for two terms occupied the responsible position of city recorder of East Portland. The examination last evening closes five years of earnest study and careful preparation for the duties of his profession. Mrs. Schmeer will leave immediately after the commencement exercises on Monday evening, for a course of study in an Eastern homeopathic college. She is an enthusiastic student and will make a successful practitioner.

NOTES.

James Lawrence and John McDonald, the fellows who engaged in a disgraceful row at the Ross saloon on Wednesday evening, were yesterday fined $5 each by the recorder, which sum they paid and were discharged.

W. T. Burney of this city, deputy prosecuting attorney, was yesterday the recipient of numerous congratulations on account of his nomination by President Cleveland for the registership of the Oregon City land office. There were several applicants for this position, each being highly endorsed, and Mr. Burney's success is therefore a fact to occasion pride.

To his surprise he was taken prisoner and the Mexicans refused to liberate him until his men had ransomed him by payment of six mules. When the Mexican soldiers took Lieut. Maus prisoner one of them said to him: "If you fellows haven't enough now, we are ready to give you more."

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

Smith Bros. & Co.'s Sawmill Burned to the Ground Last Night

Smith Bros. & Co.'s sawmill at the foot of [illegible] street was completely destroyed by fire last evening. An alarm was turned in from box [illegible] at five minutes [illegible] o'clock, at which time the fire had gained considerable headway. The inflammable nature of the building and its contents caused it to burn quickly, and when the alarm called out the entire [illegible] the flames were mounting high [illegible] the east side and the south end [illegible] giving the appearance of an extensive conflagration and attracting a great crowd to the spot. The fire was caused by the explosion of the [illegible] engineer's [illegible] Richardson which [illegible] room. He ran down to the [illegible] as soon as he heard the explosion but the fire [illegible] it was [illegible] to [illegible]. In a short time the entire [illegible] of the mill had [illegible] of the heat [illegible] roof [illegible] was quick [illegible] the spot and [illegible] streams were directed on [illegible] and piles of lumber [illegible] vicinity which [illegible] for doing good work [illegible] its spread was soon checked [illegible] the engineer [illegible] steamed up to the rear of the mill and got water on the piles of wood and lumber there. Some additional hose was soon furnished, several lengths of which burst, but Chief Morgan [illegible] provided a new supply and the pump on the boat sent two powerful streams which did good service.

With the start the fire had nothing could have saved the mill, but by the excellent service rendered by the department an immense amount of damage was averted. The books, safe etc. were removed from the office of the company, which stands some distance south of the mill, but the fire did not get near the building. [illegible] the platform in front of the mill, and when the [illegible] of the building [illegible] down a portion of the platform on which some [illegible] were standing fell, but fortunately no one was hurt. At 8:30 the frame of the building fell in and the fire was under control.

The mill was owned by W. K. Smith, A. T. Smith, Preston C. Smith and Walter V. Smith, and had a capacity of 20 000 feet per day. The loss will be between $30 000 and $40 000. There was no insurance. The firm have never paid any insurance on the property, which has been very profitable, and they have thereby probably saved enough to balance the profit and loss account. The mill came very near being burned in the great fire of 1873, and it was claimed was saved by its fire-proof paint with which it was covered.

The first mill on this site was built by Mills & Blodgett in 1860. Two years later they sold out to Lords Love and in 1864 Love disposed of the mill to I. Besser, who ran it for ten years. The old mill was torn down after Besser gave it up and a new structure started in its place by Estes & Stimpson. Before completion Estes & Stimpson sold out to Hayden and Smith Bros. They finished the mill and put in the machinery. Hayden shortly afterwards drew out of the firm and went to farming near the south fork of the McKenzie river, at which place he subsequently died. The Smiths have conducted the mill ever since.

It is likely that the mill will be rebuilt immediately.

A SECRET

PORTLAND, April [illegible]

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

The Oregon Artificial Stone company in its attempt to answer by a communication to the city council the one sent in by the Oregon Pottery company some two weeks since fully demonstrates that the grounds taken by the latter company were well taken and only goes to further expose the attempt to introduce to the exclusion of all other material for sewer purposes in the city their worthless secret compound called cement pipe. After a weak and futile attempt to prejudice the council and public by calling the Oregon Pottery company a monopoly they proceed to set forth that that company directs the Artificial Stone company to divulge their secret process for making cement pipe. How consistent! This artificial company succeeded in having the officers in charge of specifications on Harrison street sewer insert a clause that the cement pipe shall be made after the manner of the "Standard" [illegible] pipe, of which secret this Artificial Stone company claim to be the owners.

Other parties can make cement pipe as good or better than the Stockwell pipe but are debarred from bidding because they are not in possession of this secret process. No monopoly about this! Under this secret process the superintendent of streets and street committee could tell all about how the business was progressing and be able to see at a glance whether this secret process was being used or not.

We ask the Artificial Stone company to publish their communication to the council so the people can see and judge of the facts of the case. We do not ask them to publish their secret process or tell of their other secret methods. The people want and are entitled to the truth in matters of importance involving heavy expenditures.

As to the Oregon Pottery company being a monopoly. We have no secrets in our business, neither are there any patents on the process or machinery used in making terra cotta or vitrified pipe. Everybody has a right to bid on it and manufacture it if they choose. The material used is a fire clay capable of a high degree of heat to cause it to vitrify and take on a glaze, which is either produced by a coating of fusible clay or by the silicates in the clay coming in contact with a high degree of heat.

What is artificial stone? The definition given by Webster for artificial is: "Made or contrived by art or by human skill and labor in opposition to natural." Artful or cunning, "skillful, cunning, crafty." Artifice: "An ingenious device in a good or a bad sense." In a bad sense it corresponds with trick or fraud. Cement sewer pipe is deceitful because to look at it you cannot tell its qualities. It may be well or poorly made—it all looks alike.

This artificial company make the extraordinary proposition to give a bond to guarantee any cement sewer put in by them for the long period of five years. We will guarantee a wooden box longer than that. Why not guarantee their pipe for twenty five years? Simply because they dare not; no, not even for ten or fifteen years.

The Stark street sewer was laid with terra cotta thirteen or fourteen years ago, and there is no more sign of its failing now than when it was first laid. Terra cotta men can as safely guarantee their pipe for one hundred years as any other pipe for so fair a durability of material is concerned. Come, gentlemen, you must do better than that. If you would lie on a par with terra cotta or vitrified clay pipe you know when you make such a proposition that it is impracticable and that it cannot be done.

The Oregon Pottery company does not shrink from competition from any source if we can be placed on an equal footing with our competitors. All we do or have asked for is fairness that we are willing to accord to anyone. If we happen to be able to see the right some things it is not our fault. There is such a possibility that a thing can be so plain that one is not to blame for seeing it. The Harrison street sewer has been delayed from time to time in the council and the bidders of the [illegible] of a trust [illegible] for the manufacture of a [illegible] or for [illegible] to the exclusion of all other material and all parties not in possession of the secret.

The Oregon Pottery company are absolutely dependent on the Harrison street sewer. We do not waive our rights in the matter of the rights of the contractors who bid upon [illegible] as bidders. They were practically debarred from bidding on the District Association and the contract awarded to the Artificial Stone company on their specifications which called for cement pipe.

We have confidence in the city council to do the right and fair thing and when the truth is known it will be satisfied. All we ask of them is to thoroughly investigate the whole matter and give all bidders a chance to be heard.

A TRIBUTE FROM JOSEPH COOK

The following is [illegible] from the New York Independent of April 1, which contains a report of Joseph Cook's [illegible] in the Boston Monday lecture on [illegible] it turns [illegible] Platt [illegible] the [illegible] American [illegible] the Chinese question [illegible]

In Portland, Oregon, where the brave Daily OREGONIAN, the oldest paper on the Pacific slope, is now boycotted by the anti-Chinese rioters, the respectable citizens came together at the call of the mayor on March 17 and passed the following resolutions. Then followed the reading of the resolutions, which are familiar to our readers.) It is said of Jenny Lind that one of her songs so pleased Mr. Webster that whenever he heard it he was accustomed to rise in an audience, even before introduced to the singer, and make her three bows. For one, having lately been in Oregon I beg leave to make three bows across the whole breadth of the country to the city of Portland for that resolution. Applause. One bow to its bravery, another bow for its decisiveness and a third and profound bow for its fidelity to the principles of the American constitution and the Declaration of Independence. Loud applause.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

WASHINGTON.

The House Refuses to Suspend Silver Coinage.

THE FREE COINAGE BILL KILLED

The Washington Admission Bill before the Senate—A Rumor that Sparks will be Asked to Resign—Notes.

HOUSE

WASHINGTON, April 8.—James of New York called up the silver bill.

Anderson of Kansas inquired whether an opportunity would be given for the offering of an amendment.

The speaker stated that according to the order of the house the previous question was to be considered as ordered at 5:30 o'clock.

Anderson then asked that at 4 o'clock opportunity be given to members to offer amendments.

Randall objected to any change being made in the order of the house.

Dibble of South Carolina spoke in opposition to the bill. He favored suspension of silver coinage for a definite period, one or two years.

Herbert, of Alabama, premised his speech with the declaration that in the president and in the success of his administration lay the hope of democratic ascendancy, and he had no sympathy with those democrats who seemed to think the hope of democracy lay in the destruction of the present administration. He favored rehabilitation of silver but did not think this government by itself equal to the task of rehabilitating it.

A VICTORY FOR SILVER

Tillman of South Carolina advocated unlimited coinage of silver and Little of Ohio took the opposite view.

McKenna of California thought that the true and lasting interests of bi-metallism would not be conserved by free coinage.

Brown of Pennsylvania spoke in support of the double standard and vigorously combatted the proposition to suspend silver coinage.

Messrs. Hiscock and Hewitt of New York opposed the bill.

Bland of Missouri then obtained unanimous consent to withdraw his motion to recommit the bill.

James of New York then took the floor and yielded to Dibble of South Carolina to offer an amendment providing that unless in the meantime through concurrent action of the nations of Europe with the United States silver be remonetized by the 1st of July 1886, then and thereafter so much of the act of February 28, 1878 as authorized and directs the secretary of the treasury to purchase silver bullion and cause the same to be coined shall be suspended until further action by congress.

The amendment was defeated yeas 84 nays 201.

SENATE

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The senate resumed consideration of the bill granting to the [illegible] Arkansas railroad company the right of way for a railroad through Indian territory. The bill passed [illegible].

The senate unanimously passed the house bill for the erection of a building for a congressional library, without amendment.

THE WASHINGTON ADMISSION BILL

The Washington territory bill was placed before the senate and Voorhees spoke in advocacy of his amendment which consists of an enabling act for the admission of Montana territory.

Platt and Harrison opposed the amendment. Teller and McMillan favored the bill now before the committee on territories.

Voorhees's amendment was voted down by a party vote—yeas 17, nays 29, democrats voting in the affirmative and republicans in the negative.

Eustis moved to amend by confining the right of suffrage in the proposed new state to qualified male electors only. He supported his amendment in some remarks, in which he maintained that if congress agreed to the bill as it stood, admitting female suffrage, the state of Washington could elect a female U. S. senator. The result of that would be that the problem of secret sessions would be instantly solved [laughter]. On the question of the constitutional qualification of a female senator, for example as respects age, great laughter, [illegible] which the remainder of the sentence was lost. Beck remarked (sotto voce) that woman would never be bold enough to come with a [illegible] constitutional limitation as to age [renewed laughter]. Eustis characterized woman suffrage as a [illegible] proposition and as offensive and [illegible] to the institution of the family.

A long discussion ensued, but without [illegible] the senate adjourned.

SPARKS'S RESIGNATION.

A Rumor that he will be Invited to Tender his Resignation

WASHINGTON, March 8.—It is reported that William A. J. Sparks, commissioner of the general land office, has been invited to tender his resignation to the secretary of the interior. This action was the result of a controversy that occurred between Secretary Lamar and Mr. Sparks and the order issued by the former rescinding the order issued by the commissioner on the 3d of April 1885.

When Mr. Sparks came into office he proceeded upon the assumption that the entire land department was rotten to the core. Learning of individual cases of fraud he believed that not only the land grant railroads and large corporations but a majority of the settlers upon the public domain were acquiring title to public lands by fraudulent means. He regarded employes in his office and agents of the department and the clerical force with suspicion and aversion as agents of corrupt combinations. A few months after his installation in office he issued many new orders, revoking old ones and upsetting the business of the office generally.

His unique performance culminated in the famous order of April 3d, refusing to issue patents on all claims of settlers in Colorado, Dakota, Idaho, Utah, New Mexico, Montana, Washington territory, Wyoming and Nevada, the greater part of Kansas and Nebraska and the northern part of Minnesota. Every claim in this vast suspected area of country was to be examined by special agents before patents therefor should be issued by the government.

A universal howl went up from settlers in the west at this outrageous order, men who had honestly complied with the requirement of the law, perfected their claims and were entitled to patents, were debarred from obtaining them because a dishonest man had evaded or violated the laws. Just men who had loaned money on claims earned and entitled to a patent were alarmed lest their security should prove worthless. Delegates from every territory and state affected, members of congress and senators labored with Commissioner Sparks to convince him of his error, but he was obstinate, and boasted that his order would be sustained.

Yesterday the commissioner received a knock down blow in the shape of a peremptory order from the secretary of the interior revoking the order of April 3d and directing that patents should be issued. The subject was discussed at a cabinet [illegible] and the president advised Mr. Lamar to rescind Mr. Sparks's order.

WHEAT—Arrivals for the week were [illegible] tons valley and 140 tons Walla Walla, total [illegible] tons, [illegible] tons the preceding week and [illegible] this year ago. This falling off is about equal of the two grades, and in part explain the small trade in this cereal of late. In fact the past week has been so quiet as to furnish small scope for remarks. Cable advices report a dull market at Liverpool with at one time a fair degree of apparent strength at others. This [illegible] course, precluding confidence and has a depressing effect generally. New York and Chicago lost 1 to 1 cents during the week. San Francisco lost almost as much in options although spot holds up very well, largely under local influences. All this has some bearing here, the principal effect being upon business rather than prices. These last close fairly steady with us. Valley limits are generally $1 [illegible] but sales have been made up to $1.24, the two figures to-day fairly covering market values. Walla Walla grades can only be nominally quoted and they are 10c below valley. The amount of business in them is small and the great bulk of present holdings appear to be in strong hands.

FLOUR—The market is [illegible] nothing [illegible] but some agents are talking for a combination. Those who say they were the last to cut prices are not inclined to look favorably upon such a move at least they prefer to wait until others get a sufficiency of low values. It is thought some such move will take place but not immediately. The call locally has been quiet and but one mill is sending foreign. Standards still quoted $3 40@3 [illegible]. Other grades weak but in small business.

MILLSTUFF—Samples of bran to hand from Minneapolis ask [illegible] bids. Chop continues very scarce and an advance is talked of. Stocks of bran and shorts are fair, demands not improving. Quote jobbing values: Bran $12 50@14, shorts $15 @1[illegible], chop $20, middlings $[illegible]. Oil meal $2[illegible] 50 per ton.

OATS—Receipts for the week were of about the usual proportions. Because of rather better advices the market is in improved feeling, some little advance being had. Good feed for shipment commands [illegible]@38c quite readily but buyers are not competing. In a retail way sales were made at an advance. Choice milling will bring 40@42c. The San Francisco market is firmer but without marked advances.

BARLEY—Receipts increased because of a better shipping market. Here the cereal cuts no figure.

POTATOES—Quoted the same as one week ago and the market shows no change. Garnets and other common sorts are neglected at 1[illegible]@14c while Burbanks sell readily at 2[illegible].

ONIONS—Firmer, the paying price being advanced to 2½c.

APPLES—Light stocks and receipts, with market firm for choice at $1@1 25. Few common are obtainable. Some due from the East on consignment.

TROPICAL FRUITS—Common oranges scarcer and quoted $2 10@2 25. Riversides $3@3 5[illegible], navel $4@5. Lemons now in fair stock at $3 50@5 50 as to kind. Bananas $1 50@4.

VEGETABLES—California sorts by last steamer sold at: Celery 50c doz, lettuce 20c, cabbage 2½c, peas 6c, asparagus $2 75 box, cauliflower $1 50 doz.

BUTTER—California good roll 22c, choice to fancy 23@21c. Local in large supply, good to fancy selling at 22½@25c. The poor grades find no additional favor and are dull at 1[illegible]@[illegible]c.

POULTRY—Market quiet but steady: chickens $3@4, ducks $4@5, geese $5@7, turkeys 10@12c. Receipts fair but have not been excessive.

EGGS—Sold up to 12½c during the week, but at the close most dealers accept 10c, as receipts unexpectedly increased and the demand failed to take all arriving. Shipments to San Francisco sold at 14c there.

THE MEAT MARKET

Supplies throughout are very free and dealers are kept supplied. Prices are not quotably changed. Live beef quoted 4@4½c, dressed 8c. Mutton steady at 3¾@3½c for live. Live hogs quoted 4c, dressed 6@7c. Veal quiet at 8@11c.

Purify Your Blood.

Your blood may be laden with impurities, but Hood's Sarsaparilla will thoroughly cleanse enrich and vitalize it. The most severe cases of scrofula, salt rheum, boils, pimples—in fact all affections rising from impure blood—yield to Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier. It also cures dyspepsia, biliousness, sick headache, kidney and liver complaints, sharpens the appetite and builds up the whole system.

Charles O. Robert, East Wilson, N. Y., had 14 scrofulous sores and face and neck. Nothing helped him till he took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which effected a complete cure. His druggist says it is "A Great Victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla."

"Hood's Sarsaparilla has been used with perfect success in our family for catarrh in the stomach and I [illegible] relieved. My little one is entirely cured, and we still continue its use as a family medicine." Mrs. E. [illegible] Somerville, Mass.
